There are 3 bugs in it. 1) Code folding got frozen. The collapse/unfolded state doesn't reflect what the code is supposed to be. 2) The IntelliJ IDE shows syntax errors when using code folding. 3) Outside word document settings are not working. Probably jetbrains doesn't give a thought of this. A: The problem was not related to Javascript/CSS. IntelliJ was showing the option for proper syntax in Autocomplete options. What I did was to uncheck it and now a close look at a few class properties in JSP shows the correct syntax like this : IntelliJ produces right syntax in Javascript also. Here I had to uncheck the Quick documentation check box from the right pane and now IntelliJ can produce the auto documentation as well. - IntelliJ does a great job for me. Once I opened it for the first time I would start using it immediately without seeing the splash. If some one is facing the issue of : Modify this file in: .../java/com/google/android/gms/.../MainActivity.java Then I had to uncheck the following options from the help menu to get rid of the similar issue : See the documentation of IDE for full list of options. Uncheck following steps from : IntelliJ Help menu. Note : If you close IntelliJ then re-open the project and right-click on the project file (Choose Project Structure-Build-Export) and choose Archive (Create new artifact) and then once again right-click on the archive file and Choose Run and Run As - (Select Run configuration, then type the name and choose "Java Application") a new run configuration will be created, this will help to produce an IntelliJ execution jar. However I still think that the setting for exporting jar-execution-jar is missing. Hope it helps. Q: FileInputStream reading from client gives StringIndexOutOfBoundsException Here is my bit of java code: public class InputTest extends SwingWorker { //Receive input from client @Override protected String doInBackground() throws Exception { Scanner keyboard = new Scanner(System

Say I have a cf library that uses Newtonsoft.Json to persist configuration. The configuration is pretty standard and can be easily changed from within Visual Studio, eg. by loading the values from a text file. However, if I want to make this file configurable outside of Visual Studio, I'd like a way to allow people to pass some command line switches to change the settings. I've seen the MSBuild community do this by passing a property to the project file to tell it where to look for these settings. But is there something that could be set from a command line or from the environment to allow something similar? A: Yes, this is possible by adding a special property in a csproj file. config.txt More on how to set that property can be found here. 1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to a valve for the discharge of waste water and a method of making the valve. 2. Description of the Prior Art U.S. Pat. No. 3,822,984 discloses a rotary valve adapted to be mounted in a pipeline of a waste water system. The valve comprises a housing within which a plurality of rotatable valve discs are mounted. Each disc is arranged to be rotated by a drive connection to one end of a drive shaft. The other end of the drive shaft is pivotally connected to a piston movable in a cylinder in the housing, so that the piston in one position of movement of the drive shaft is connected to one end of a flexible bellows, and in its other position of movement of the drive shaft is connected to the other end of the flexible bellows. When the valve is being used, the piston and bellows are connected together at one end and to the drive shaft at the other. The disc is arranged so that when the disc is
